Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, California Service Center, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is a restaurant. It seeks to employ the beneficiary permanently in the United States as a specialty cook. As required by statute, the petition is accompanied by an individual labor certification approved by the Department of Labor. The director determined that the petitioner had not established that it had the financial ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage as of the priority date of the visa petition.

On appeal, counsel submits a brief and copies of amended Form 1120 tax returns for the petitioner for 1999 and 2000.

Section 203(b)(3)(A)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(3)(A)(i), provides for the granting of preference classification to qualified immigrants who are capable, at the time of petitioning for classification under this paragraph, of performing skilled labor (requiring at least two years training or experience), not of a temporary or seasonal nature, for which qualified workers are not available in the United States.

8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) states in pertinent part:

Ability of prospective employer to pay wage. Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be either in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

Eligibility in this matter hinges on the petitioner's ability to pay the wage offered as of the petition's priority date, which is the date the request for labor certification was accepted for processing by any office within the employment system of the Department of Labor, and continuing. The beneficiary's salary as stated on the labor certification is $10.92 per hour or $22,713.60 per annum.

The petitioner originally submitted a copy of the petitioner's Internal Revenue Service (IRS) Form 1120 for 2000 which showed a taxable income of $9,335.

In determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage, CIS will examine the net income figure reflected on the petitioner's federal income tax return, without consideration of depreciation or other expenses. Reliance on federal income tax returns as a basis for determining a petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is well-established by both CIS and judicial precedent. Elatos Restaurant Corp. v. Sava, 632 F.Supp. 1049, 1054 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (citing Tongatapu Woodcraft Hawaii, Ltd. v. Feldman, 736 F.2d 1305 (9th Cir. 1984); see also Chi-Feng Chang v. Thornburgh, 719 F.Supp. 532 (N.D. Texas 1989); K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F.Supp. 1080 (S.D.N.Y. 1985); Ubeda v. Palmer, 539 F.Supp. 647 (N.D. Ill. 1982), aff'd, 703 F.2d 571 (7th Cir. 1983).

The director determined that the evidence submitted did not establish that the petitioner had the ability to pay the proffered wage and denied the petition accordingly.

As noted above, on appeal, the petitioner, through counsel, has submitted copies of amended 1999 and 2000 IRS Form 1120 tax returns. Form 1120 for 2000 now shows a taxable income of $33,085. Whereas the petitioner had shown additional income of $92 (line 10) on the original return submitted with the petition, the amended return shows additional income of $23,842. No explanation is provided as to where this significant amount of additional income came from, and there is nothing in the record to indicate that the amended return was in fact filed with the Internal Revenue Service. Furthermore, it is significant that the director's decision denying the petition is dated August 12, 2002, and the amended tax returns are dated September 11, 2002.

The evidence submitted initially and on appeal are in conflict. Only after receiving the director's decision did the petitioner amend its tax returns. Doubt has been cast on the reliability of the petitioner's evidence. Matter of Ho, 19 I&N Dec. 582 (BIA 1988).

Accordingly, after a review of the evidence submitted, it is concluded that the petitioner has not credibly established that it had sufficient available funds to pay the salary offered as of the priority date of filing of the petition and continuing.

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The petitioner has not met that burden.

ORDER:     The appeal is dismissed.
